

WEBINAR

Turning Silver into Gold

How can ageing be reframed as an opportunity for empowerment? Dr Emi Kiyota and Charlene Chang discuss unleashing the potential of seniors by giving them a voice, choice and control, and enabling them to socialise through technology and the built environment.

🕒 5 min | Read →

Read Urban Systems Study Towards Ageing Well: Planning a Future-Ready Singapore →

REPORT

Source: Macau Photo Agency, Unsplash

Better Cities with Research in the New Normal

The global pandemic has dramatically altered city living. It is crucial for practitioners and academics to study how evolving policies, social trends and emerging technologies impact future cities, and to work together in new ways to formulate better policies post-pandemic.

🕒 5 min | Read →

Urban Solutions Issue #18: Adapting to a Disrupted World

Source: Singapore Food Agency

Food Security Despite the Odds

Singapore has been planning for long-term food security through its “three food baskets” strategy. It is also boosting local production by supporting a new breed of farmers through research and technology, creative planning of farm spaces and growing community support for local produce.

🕒 12 min | Read →

Active Mobility Can Help Cities Bounce Forward

Active mobility is not only a transportation solution to solve traffic and environmental issues. It can boost social resilience and lift economies too, says urban designer and architect Chintan Raveshia.

🕒 5 min | Read →

Cars Were Guests on Amsterdam's Streets Even Before COVID-19

Amsterdam has steadily been introducing car-lite measures to create a liveable and accessible city. Former Deputy Mayor Sharon Dijksma shares how the city's forward-looking actions gave it a headstart in responding to the COVID-19 pandemic.

🕒 5 min | Read →